June 27th

On this day in...

1990: In LA the afternoon high spiked to 109°, the second highest June temperature on record, and the fifth highest temperature on record. Sundowner winds sent temperatures soaring to 109° at the Santa Barbara airport, while the temperature at El Capitan Beach 11 miles west reached 116°. 60 mph wind gusts were reported in the city of Santa Barbara, but only 30 mph at the airport.

1976: A significant heat wave enveloped Southern California. Alpine set a record high for the month of June with a temperature of 109°.

1926: The minimum temperature was 97° in Palm Springs, the highest minimum temperature on record.